Background

The unacceptably low proportion of eligible pregnant women receiving Intermittent Preventive Treatment for malaria in pregnancy (IPTp) with quality-assured (QA) sulfadoxine-pyrimethamine (SP) leaves 15 million women unprotected from malaria. It is urgent to develop and assess the effectiveness of alternative approaches for prevention of malaria in pregnancy. The TIPTOP project will apply a ground-breaking, community-based approach, called C-IPTp, that fosters partnership and strengthens the dynamic link between communities and health facilities, especially for the most vulnerable people. Specifically, we will introduce a novel platform to increase coverage of IPTp3-SP to a minimum of 50% in project areas, across targeted countries, to prevent malaria in pregnancy (MiP). The ultimate goal of TIPTOP is to gather conclusive evidence of the effectiveness of C-IPTp and submit it to the WHO for possible implementation in sub-Saharan Africa. Rigorous information of the cost-effectiveness of C-IPTp is part of the evidence to be gathered.

ISGlobal – the Barcelona Institute for Global Health -- is an international health research centre whose ultimate goal is to help close the gaps in health disparities between and within different regions of the world. For this, we focus on knowledge generation (research), training, and implementation (both policy and global development).

I. OBJECT OF THE SUBJECT

The present document is intended to guide the provision of services of a consultant or institution that will perform the TIP TOP cost-effectiveness study in collaboration with ISGlobal.

All the technical specifications contained in this document are considered to be part of the minimum requirements and do not exclude any other needs for compliance with the purpose of the service contracted.

II. CONTENT OF THE WORK

Scope of work

The project seeks to assess the comparative cost-effectiveness of delivering IPTp through CHWs and through health facilities, as evidence from existing studies is limited and little is still known in a generalizable way.
The objective of the contract will be to calculate the economic costs of the intervention (direct and indirect) for HH and health system and compare to those of IPTp delivered exclusively through the ANC. The economic evaluation will include the estimation of health systems savings of C-IPTp delivery and geographical modeling of the economic impact of the intervention (by extrapolating findings to other SSA countries where IPTp is delivered through the ANC and where there are CHW programs in place), taking into account input variables such as malaria endemicity and ANC attendance, among others. Intermediate indicators of the intervention (such as its equity, efficiency and quality of C-IPTp delivery) will be also evaluated.
